

'WISH I HAD BEEN ONLY 5-DAY WIFE,' SAYS PEACHES, SEEKING TO FORGET

Ex-Cinderella Revels In New Freedom, Buys Dog and Goes to Church

After the terror and suffering experienced, she says, during her five months as the wife of Edward West Browning, Peaches at last is getting her health back, shaking off her attacks of nerves, and leading a normal, natural life, she asserts today in her daily article published exclusively in The GRAPHIC.

"I have a dog which Mr. Browning wouldn't let me have. I can go to church on Sundays now. I don't have to get up early any more as Mr. Browning used to make me do. There is nothing so good now as freedom," she declares.

At last I am beginning to enjoy life again, just a little. I am beginning to feel free again. At times I even forget for a moment the things I suffered while I was with my husband.

I can actually smile at some of the things he is saying, or at things which his lawyers force him to say.

Why shouldn't I try to smile a little again, now that I am away from him forever. I must look forward to the future full of days which will be peacefully happy because he will not be able to disturb them.

Denies She Was Five-Day Wife

One of his outbursts which caused me amusement was his statement that I was a five-day wife. In his court complaint, I understand, he charges that I didn't live with him as a real wife after the fifth day of our honeymoon. Well, at any rate, he has changed his tune since he first started talking about me. He used to say that from the very beginning I was his wife in name only. Now he says I was his actual wife for five days.

It's peculiar that a man shouldn't remember exactly about such things as that. Either Mr. Browning has a remarkably short memory, or things like that don't mean much to him.

Now I wish I had been his wife only five days, and that I had left him immediately. I would be much happier if I had. I wouldn't have suffered all those tortures that came to me later. And it would have been easier to forget.

Forget! If I only could! But now I have been almost a month away from him, and already I am recovering my interest in living.

Recovering Gradually

I am gradually recovering my health, and that means a lot. Mother has taken such good care of me. I haven't had one of those nervous spells since I left Mr. Browning. The cause is removed. And now I have hopes that I will gradually come back to normal.

I'm getting a lot of sleep and rest. Mother doesn't make me get up early like I used to have to do when I was living with Mr. Browning. And it is so peaceful here—that's what counts.

And now I've got a little dog—the cutest little Pekinese. He's a darling. Mr. Browning would never let me have a dog, although I used to beg for one. He doesn't like dogs. But I wanted one so much after I knew that I wasn't going to have a baby.

Calls Her Puppy Woof

The puppy is named Woof. He is so amusing and such pleasant company. He is very lively for a Pekinese and he loves to romp around. I am always happy with him. He helps me take my mind off my suffering in those days gone by.

Mother and I are going to take little Woof on a trip we are planning. Oh, that trip will be so different from that "honeymoon" trip I went on with Mr. Browning last summer. This time we can go where we like and do as we please. And there won't be any one telling me every minute what I should do, and making me pose for pictures, and all that. Oh, what a relief!

At last my days are my own. I can live my own life. No longer will I be haunted by the fear of those terrible days and nights I spent with Mr. Browning. That is over, thank Heaven, and it can never be again.

Can Have Girl Friends

Now I can have whatever girl friends I like without objection from Mr. Browning. For some reason he didn't want me to keep up my many friendships after I married him. I could never under-

VOCOSTARK

The New Voice Science
Most marvelous
discovery of the age

Whether you have a voice or not you can be taught to sing beautifully in a short time.

Old or young—weak or strong—the results are just the same. Lost voices restored and made better than ever by Glen Morris Stark's wonderful discovery.

The Stark method has given beautiful voices to those who never thought of singing in public. It is the most simple way to learn how to sing correctly. You can sing for hours without tiring the voice. You do not require a piano to practice your exercises. There is no age limit with the Stark method, because there is no strain. The speaking voice is equally benefited.

Results have been phenomenal not only in cases of new voices but in the restoring of lost voices.

COME AND INVESTIGATE

Visit our studio for free voice trial. Come in and find out for yourself what astonishing results have been accomplished for others.

Classes now being formed for children, advanced voices and for those who do not sing. Make application at once. Very moderate fee. Private individual instruction also given.
